MISSION STATEMENT

We, the parishioners of St. Paul, Onaway, open to the guidance of the Holy Spirit, are dedicated to preserve, live and proclaim the Good News brought by Jesus. As a sacramental people, we are committed to welcome all into Christ's presence among us.

From the Pastor's Desk

Dear Sisters and Brothers in Christ Jesus,
The Catholic Church in Early America:

A new kind of immigrant

Catholics in revolutionary America tended to be wealthy, English speaking, and more focused on private devotions than on public displays of their faith. Thus the Protestant majority mostly tolerated them. But when, in the nineteenth century, Catholic immigrants began pouring in from Ireland, Germany, Italy, Poland, Mexico, and Lithuania, Americans became increasingly anxious about their influence on the republic. In 1789 US Catholics numbered only around 30,000; but by 1826, 250,000 had arrived, and by 1850, Catholic ranks had swelled to more than a million. These new immigrants tended to be poor and uneducated. With the exception of German Catholics, who settled on farms in the Midwest, they clustered by nationality in northeastern cities. Living in squalid tenements and employed in low-paying jobs, they were often caricatured as "infidels" and drunks responsible for the nation's growing crime rate.

Irish Catholics were especially reviled. Influenced by centuries of British hostility toward the Irish, cartoonists often depicted them as dark-skinned savages, racially inferior to whites. These Catholic immigrants were also more militant about defending their faith than earlier generations of American Catholics had been. Influenced by the Catholic revival in Europe, they held large parish mission meetings in urban neighborhoods, publicized reports of Marian apparitions around the world (especially at Lourdes in 1858), and claimed publicly that "sacramentals" like medals, statues, pictures, and holy water could be means of God's grace. They also insisted that miraculous healings were possible, a claim that many Protestants at the time found superstitious.

It is important for us as Catholic Christians, when considering the crisis of immigrants massed at our southern border, that we were once marginalized and unwelcomed!!! Catholics were vilified and considered to be a threat to this nation! We should not be too quick to judge other brothers and sisters in Christ Jesus; while still advocating for the rule of law and legal immigration reform!!!

And remember,

You are Loved,
Father Patrick
